Dear Pat:

I wish to thank you for the excellent program which Mr. [redacted] and others of your staff presented to our Midcareer Executive Development Course on 15 June 1966. The briefings were most informative and greatly appreciated by the Midcareerists, all of whom expressed regret that your other commitments prevented them from meeting you.

As you suggested in your letter to Admiral Raborn, arrangements for future briefings for our Midcareerists would certainly be facilitated if handled directly between our respective staffs. At present, [redacted] is the Administrator for the Midcareer Executive Development Course and he will be pleased to effect coordination with [redacted]. With respect to the possibility of providing NSA Midcareer officers with briefings at CIA Headquarters, you can indeed count on my support in assuring the development of a program suited to your needs. On the assumption that [redacted] will be the action officer for NSA, I suggest that he get in touch with Mr. John Richardson, Director of Training, when your plans are far enough advanced to require further discussion.

Sincerely,

PH
